The Council of the Gipson Institute invites PhD and MA students enrolled at Lehigh University who are working on dissertations or theses (or other relevant research projects) in eighteenth-century studies to apply for a summer writing fellowship. Grants of $2,000-4,000 are possible, depending on available funding. All students working on eighteenth-century projects are encouraged to apply, although preference will be given to more advanced candidates. The dissertation/thesis may be in any field of eighteenth century studies, but should focus substantially on that time period. Please note that university policy requires that all supported work comply with COVID-19 protocols.

Applications should include a curriculum vitae and a one page statement of purpose briefly describing your project, as well as specific plans of the work you expect to complete during the summer. Please include a plan for compliance with COVID-19 safety measures.

Recipients will be expected to present their work at a Gipson colloquium (or other appropriate venue).

Email your application and letter of recommendation to:
The Office of Interdisciplinary Programs
incasip@lehigh.edu
The deadline for applications is March 1, 2021.

For questions contact:
Professor Michelle LeMaster, mil206@lehigh.edu or Professor Lyndon Dominique, lyd211@lehigh.edu